

Marguerite Angels – named for their flowers

Countless hours of practice, years of experience, patience and a steady hand go into giving a Wendt & Kühn Marguerite Angel its characteristic face. Olly Wendt designed the first six-piece group of this figurine series way back in 1929 and the angels are still characterized today by her inspired childlike facial expression, delicate body and of course the garland of Marguerite daisies adorning their blond curls. Whether provided with musical instruments, toys or baking utensils, whether as standing figurines or seated on little blue benches – the adorable Marguerite Angels still spread just as much harmony and contentment among today's collectors and enthusiasts as they did in the very beginning.

Photographer: Wolfgang Schmidt